Introduction

The National Institute for Criminal Justice Reform (NICJR), along with Advance Peace, the Center for American Progress, and Cities United, has worked to create and provide technical assistance to offices of violence prevention (OVPs, also known as offices of neighborhood safety and other names) throughout the country for more than 15 years. This national initiative is premised on the notion that safety should not be the exclusive responsibility of policing and the criminal justice system, and that investments should be made in less invasive interventions, prevention, and the promotion of healthy lifestyles and communities.

In early 2020, NICJR surveyed more than 20 current OVPs and local violence prevention government agencies, including entities in Oakland and Los Angeles, CA; Indianapolis, IN; New York, NY; Newark, NJ; Washington, DC; and more. Through the survey, both small and large cities and counties clearly indicated that they would benefit from a national learning community focused on increasing their expertise and effectiveness in violence prevention. As a result, NICJR and partners established the National Offices of Violence Prevention Network (NOVPN).

Launched in 2021 with 21 member agencies, the NOVPN hosts virtual and in-person member convenings; provides training and presentations on effective violence reduction practices; coordinates cross-OVP learning exchanges and site visits; offers leadership and management development; and supports OVPs in growing their capacity for data collection and reporting, fund development, and media relations. The Network also supports the creation of new OVPs in jurisdictions interested in developing such agencies.

Since the NOVPN was launched in 2021, NICJR has collected data on the implementation of different offices across the country. To the extent possible, the most up-to-date data is provided in this report. Unless otherwise noted, data is from 2022 and 2023.

NICJR previously published a National Offices of Violence Prevention Network Report based on information gathered through the 2021 OVP survey. This landscape scan served to promote transparency and shed light on existing infrastructures and investments being made in violence reduction efforts across the country. The National OVP Network has grown to now nearly 40 jurisdictions that are NOVPN members. Thus, this report offers an updated and expanded overview of the NOVPN, with specific information about member agencies that responded to a brief survey.

Office of Violence Reduction

The Atlanta Office of Violence Reduction was established in 2021 and has an annual budget of $270,000, with funding from the City's General Fund and the American Rescue Plan Act. There are 1.5 full-time equivalents (FTEs) in the agency, including a Director (1 FTE) and a Deputy Director (0.5 FTE). Housed in the Atlanta Office of the Mayor, the Office of Violence Reduction's mission is to address the rise in gun violence in the city, coordinate citywide violence prevention and reduction efforts, and manage Cure Violence grants to local community-based organizations (CBOs).⁵ These grants were significantly bolstered in 2021, when the Mayor of Atlanta pledged $5,000,000 of the City's ARPA funding toward violence prevention programs such as Cure Violence.⁶ Strategies such as street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, and hospital-based violence intervention are all in use by the Office and/or the City.

Mayor's Office of Neighborhood Safety and Engagement

The Baltimore Mayor's Office of Neighborhood Safety and Engagement (MONSE) was established in 2020 and has an annual budget of approximately $25,000,000. Funding sources for the Office are the City's General Fund and various grant funding, including funding from a $50,000,000, three-year ARPA grant.⁷ The 39 funded FTEs in the agency include 35 filled positions and four vacant positions. Housed within the Mayor's Office in Baltimore, MONSE's mission is to empower community partners and City agencies to play a more active role in the co-production of public safety and prevention of violence through a trauma-responsive, healing-centered, and equity-based approach for the benefit of all Baltimoreans.⁸ This work is rooted in a holistic approach to neighborhood health and safety and informed by community input. MONSE was developed through extensive community engagement that included 36 community input sessions with around 13,000 individuals. Ongoing engagement efforts include listening tours, surveys, and biannual youth summits.

MONSE activities to date have included pre-arrest youth diversion, reentry services, victim services, community violence intervention, and policy development and research. MONSE is involved in implementation of the City's Group Violence Reduction Strategy, manages the City's Violence Prevention Taskforce, and oversees the Baltimore Public Safety Accountability Dashboard.⁹ Notably, in July 2021, the Mayor and MONSE released a comprehensive violence prevention plan.¹⁰ In addition to coordinating violence prevention activities across City agencies and community partners, the Office provides direct services as well as grants to CBOs. Strategies such as gun violence intervention (GVI) / CeaseFire, street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, employment assistance, fellowship opportunities, and hospital-based violence intervention are all in use by MONSE and/or the City.

Office of Violence Reduction

The Chicago Office of Violence Reduction was established in 2019 and has an annual budget of $30,000,000. Funding sources for the Office are the City's General Fund, special tax funds, and grant funding. There are ten staff members in the agency. Housed within the Mayor's Office, the Office's mission is to reduce violence in Chicago, particularly in 15 priority areas that have been identified as having the highest victimization rates.

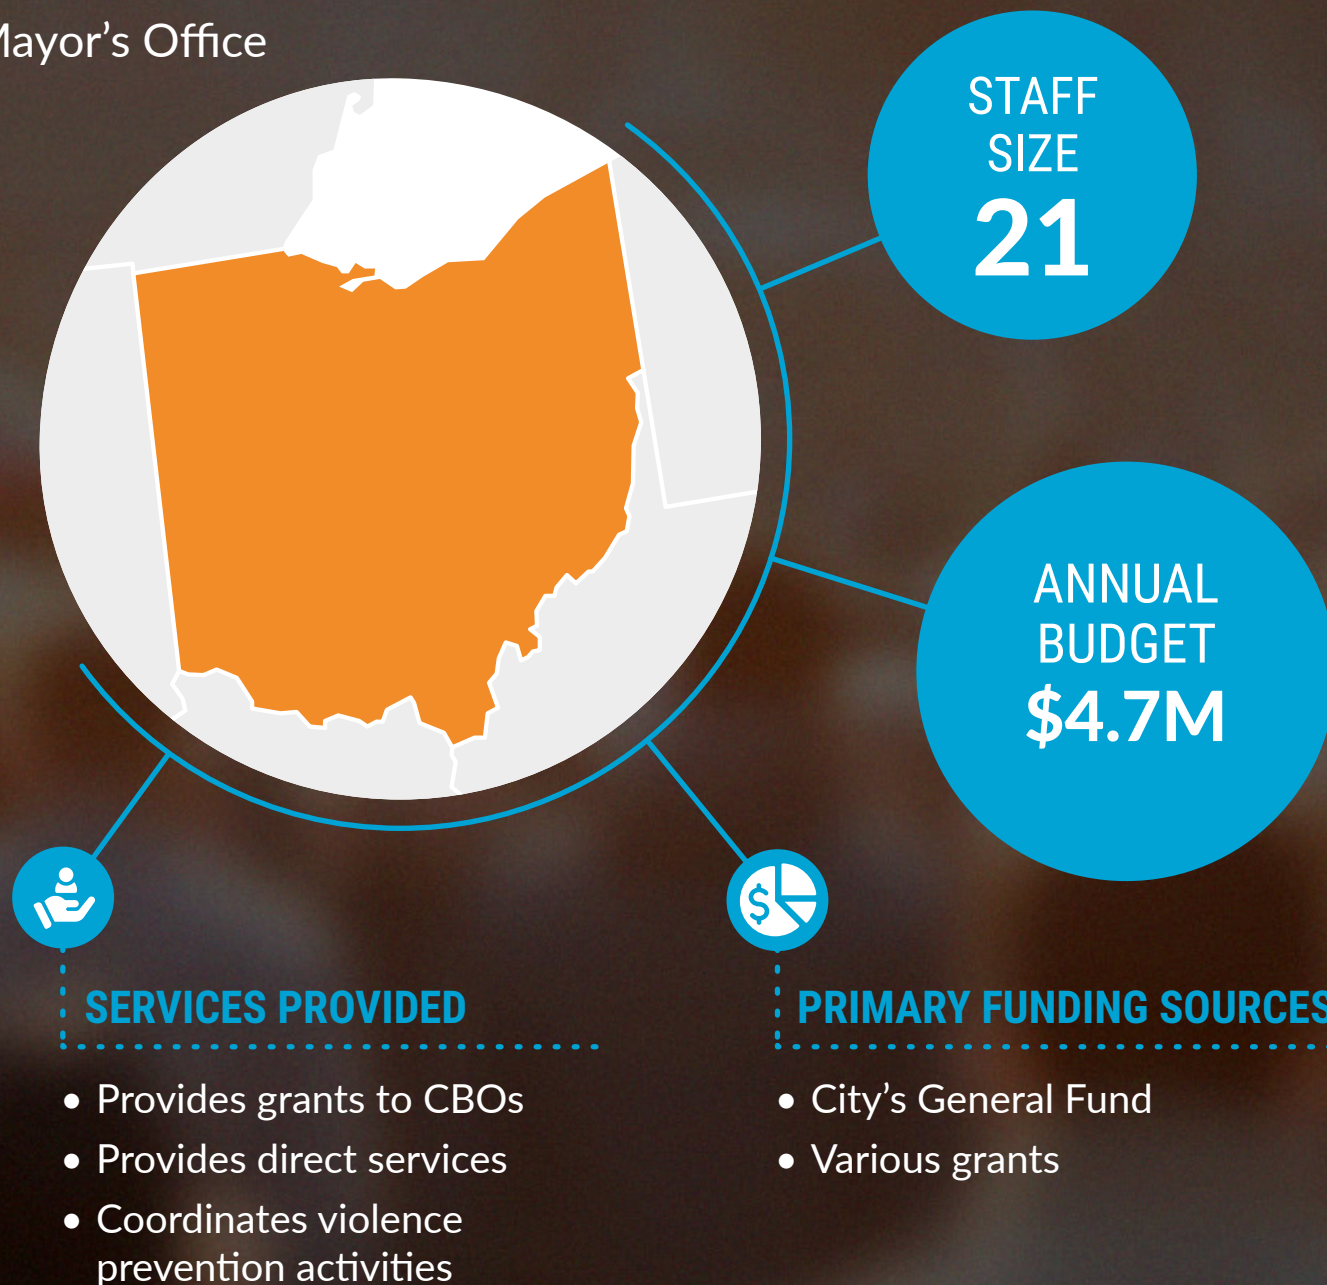

Strategies such as violence interruption, case management, employment assistance, fellowship opportunities, and hospital-based violence intervention are all in use by the Office and/or the City. To date, the OVP has implemented street outreach strategies and victim services. In addition, the Office provides direct services with OVP staff, coordinates violence prevention activities, supports policy development, and conducts research.

The Office was developed through several community forums that were held with local civic leaders and community-based organizations. Ongoing community engagement efforts include the Violence Reduction Planning Process, where meetings are convened with community leaders to obtain their input on the implementation of the City's violence reduction plan. Community partners are engaged and provide input throughout the process. The Office's Summer Safety Strategy is an effort to implement an allgovernment and community response to address the fifteen most violent police beats.

Office of Prevention, Intervention, and Opportunity for Youth and Young Adults

The Cleveland Office of Prevention, Intervention, and Opportunity for Youth and Young Adults was established in 2017 and has an annual budget of $4,657,799. The Office is funded through the City's General Fund and various grants. There are 21 FTEs in the agency, with 10 current vacancies. Housed in the Office of the Mayor, the Office of Prevention, Intervention, and Opportunity for Youth and Young Adults is committed to addressing the root causes of violence based on a public health model and ultimately improving the overall health, wellbeing, and quality of life of youth, their families, and communities.

The Office is playing a key role in developing the City's first long-term comprehensive violence prevention plan. The upcoming launch of the plan is slated to involve neighborhood engagement and resident input. The Office's other activities to date have included transitioning recreation centers into trauma-informed care resource centers; providing neighborhood-based social support specialists to help residents with basic needs and referral services; and providing programming in the areas of education, health and wellness, career readiness, the arts, and sports and recreation. The Office provides grants to CBOs, offers direct services, and coordinates local violence prevention activities. Strategies such as street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, employment assistance, youth diversion and enrichment, and hospital-based violence intervention are all in use by the Office and/or the City.¹¹

Community Health and Violence Prevention Services

The Community Health and Violence Prevention Services Division within the Harris County Public Health Department was created in 2021 and has an annual budget of $3,500,000. The main funding source for the Division is the City's General Fund. There are 20 FTEs in the Division, including 17 filled positions and three vacant positions. The Division's mission is to provide strategic direction, oversight, and implementation to address the root causes of violence through a public health approach.¹² The Division was developed with public input gathered through community engagement meetings, health fairs, and mobile health villages with business owners, residents, law enforcement, and other relevant stakeholders.

The Community Health and Violence Prevention Services Division provides grants to CBOs and coordinates local violence prevention activities such as the Holistic Assistance Response Teams (HART).¹³ Launched in 2022, HART aims to reduce unnecessary law enforcement or hospital interventions for non-emergency 911 calls by dispatching unarmed first responder teams trained in behavioral health and on-scene medical assistance to aid residents experiencing homelessness, behavioral health issues, or non-emergency health or social welfare concerns. The Division continues to engage the community for input in the development and implementation of pilot programming such as HART. Other strategies in use by the Division and/or the County include street outreach / violence interruption and hospital-based violence intervention.

Office of Public Health and Safety

The Indianapolis Office of Public Health and Safety was established in 2018 and has an annual budget of $300,000. The main funding sources for the Office are the City's General Fund; funding from a three-year, $37,500,000 ARPA grant, and other federal grants. Housed in the Office of the Mayor, the Office of Public Health and Safety includes 68 FTEs, with 10 current vacancies. The Office's mission is to address root causes of crime and reduce violence in Indianapolis neighborhoods.

The Office of Public Health and Safety convenes public safety and public health agencies with community partners to execute policy efforts in the areas of violent crime reduction, criminal justice reform, reentry, food security, and homelessness.¹⁴ The Office manages the Indy Peace Fellowship, an 18-month Advance Peace offshoot that involves cognitive behavioral therapy and stipend distribution for individuals at highest risk for violence.¹⁵ The Office also coordinates local violence prevention activities and provides grants to CBOs. Such grants include the Community-Based Violence Prevention Partnership and the Community Crime Prevention Grant Program, both of which provide funding for grassroots organizations working to prevent violence through evidence-based programming.¹⁶ The Office's ongoing community engagement efforts include resource fairs and a series of outreach events in Indianapolis communities that have been most affected by gun violence. More broadly, strategies such as GVI/CeaseFire, street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, and fellowship opportunities are all in use by the Office and/or the City.

The Regional Approach to Gun Violence Initiative in Seattle and King County was established in 2020 and has an annual budget of $12,000,000, with funding from the City of Seattle's General Fund and the American Rescue Plan Act. Housed in the Seattle and King County Public Health Department, the Regional Approach to Gun Violence Initiative currently has five FTEs. The Regional Approach to Gun Violence seeks to prevent and eliminate gun violence, ensure equitable health outcomes for all by providing life-affirming care and resources to the individuals and families who are most impacted by unjust systems, and support a regional approach to community-led gun violence reduction.¹⁹ To develop the Regional Approach to Gun Violence, the City and County partnered with Cities United and coordinated with local community leaders to create a community safety and wellbeing plan. The City and County continue to engage the community through an ongoing partnership with 13 local CBOs that assist in managing the Regional Approach.

Through the Regional Approach, the City and County provide grants to CBOs, coordinate violence prevention activities, and engage in policy development and research. To date, the Regional Approach has implemented the Seattle Community Safety Initiative, a safe passage program, critical incident response, life coaching, hot spot remediation, family healing and restoration, and community engagement events.²⁰ More broadly, through the Regional Approach and other related efforts, the City and County are employing multiple strategies to reduce violence such as street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, employment assistance, and hospital-based violence intervention.

Office of Violence Prevention

The Los Angeles Office of Violence Prevention (OVP) was established in 2019 through a board motion by the LA County Board of Supervisors.²³ The OVP has an annual budget of approximately $12,000,000,²⁴ with funding from the City's General Fund, a special tax, and a one-time ARPA grant allocation of $25,000,000. Housed in the County's Department of Public Health, the OVP has 25 FTEs including five part-time positions.

The Los Angeles County Office of Violence Prevention works to strengthen coordination, capacity, and partnerships to address the root causes of violence, advance policies and practices that are grounded in race equity, prevent all forms of violence, and promote healing across all communities. The OVP was developed with significant community input via countywide listening sessions, interviews with subject matter experts, and surveys in communities with high rates of violence. The Office continues to ensure community engagement through the Community Partnership Council, which provides guidance and recommendations on strategic plans, equitable resource allocations, and policy and advocacy efforts. Additional community engagement efforts include Community Action for Peace Networks, which engage communities with the highest rates of violence,²⁵ as well as the Peer-to-Peer Violence Prevention Learning Academy.

The Office provides grants to CBOs, coordinates violence prevention activities, and engages in policy development and research. The OVP also monitors the trends and circumstances of violent deaths affecting Los Angeles County to inform decision makers and program planners about strategies to prevent and intervene in violence in the community, at home, and in the workplace. To date, the Office has implemented community violence intervention, crisis response, a Gun Violence Prevention Platform, a Storytelling Project that uplifts the voices of survivors, a Parks After Dark program, a Trauma Prevention Initiative that aims to reduce the disproportionate impact of violence and trauma among Black and Latino communities of South Los Angeles,²⁶ and Regional Violence Prevention Coalitions. Strategies such as street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, capacity building / community engagement, and hospital-based violence intervention are all in use by the Office and/or the County.

Office for Safe and Healthy Neighborhoods

The Louisville Office for Safe and Healthy Neighborhoods (OSHN) was established in 2013 and has an annual budget of approximately $4,300,000. Funding sources for the Office include the City's General Fund, local foundation funds, and grant funding. There are currently 27 staff members in the Office. Housed within the Mayor's Office in Louisville, OSHN's mission is to address violence from its roots by working collaboratively with communities to develop and deploy strategies for violence prevention that are comprehensive, socially just, evidence-based, and grounded in public health.

The Office has three strategic initiatives: strategic engagement and outreach, community mobilization for violence prevention, and violence prevention innovation & institutionalization. Hospital-based violence intervention, cure violence, and GVI/ CeaseFire have all been implemented by the Office. The Office also provides grants to CBOs, provides direct services with OVP staff, coordinates violence prevention activities, and conducts policy development.

In the development of the Office, workgroups consisting of 10-25 people that represented each of the highly affected communities were consulted for violence prevention strategic planning. Ongoing community engagement efforts include general community outreach where staff canvass, facilitate peace walks, and engage in community-based activities that build social cohesion. The Office's ambassador institute facilitates community mobilization for violence prevention through capacity building, education, advocacy, and action. It includes conflict resolution, youth mental health aid, and community organization. Individuals who complete the Institute program are invited to participate in the Ambassador workgroups that conceptualize violence prevention projects in communities. The Institute also oversees Networking Nights, which are opportunities for community members and community-based organizations to network around a particular violence-related topic.

The New York City Office of Neighborhood Safety (ONS) was created in 2014 and has an annual budget of $75,000,000. Funding sources for the Office are the City's General Fund and a special tax. There are 20 staff members currently. Housed in the Mayor's Office, the ONS is dedicated to transforming the government's approach to public safety and upholding community ownership of sustained peace. ONS is committed to placing community voices at the helm of public safety solutions; recognizing and following the leadership of community-based solutions; grounding public safety responses in racial equity and acknowledgment of the root causes of violence; and approaching harm reduction through the power of kinship, healing, and love.

Strategies such as violence interruption, case management, employment assistance, fellowship opportunities, and hospital-based violence intervention programs are all in use by the Office and/or the City. To date, the Office has implemented Cure Violence, Advance Peace, and shooting incident reviews. An evaluation of NYC's Cure Violence program can be found here. In addition, the ONS provides grants to CBOs, provides direct services with OVP staff, coordinates violence prevention activities, supports policy development, and conducts research.

When creating the ONS, advocacy across multiple layers of government by NYC's gun violence activists was taken into account as well as public safety solutions created based on research and data analysis. Ongoing engagement efforts include engaging with communities as equal partners, scaling community-based solutions, fostering capacity building for community organizations, and supporting local leaders to gain access to decision making.

Oakland, CA

Department of Violence Prevention

Formerly known as Oakland Unite, the Oakland Department of Violence Prevention (DVP) was established in 2020 and has an annual budget of $16,000,000. The majority of DVP funding comes from a local, voter-approved ballot initiative known as Measure Z. The Department uses Measure Z funds to invest in violence intervention and prevention strategies that interrupt the cycle of violence and recidivism. DVP also receives City General Fund dollars as well as state and federal grant funding. There are currently almost 18 FTEs including three vacancies in the Department. Housed in the City Manager's Office, the DVP operates under five mandates: reduce gun violence, reduce intimate partner violence, reduce commercial sexual exploitation, reduce trauma associated with unsolved cold cases, and reduce levels of community trauma.

Strategies such as GVI/CeaseFire, violence interruption, case management, employment assistance, and hospital-based violence interventions are all in use by the Department and/or the City. The Department has implemented the following violence prevention and reduction strategies to date:

- Gang/group violence reduction strategies (violence interruption, hospital-based intervention, street outreach, homicide support services, long-term mental health care / healing, life coaching, employment training, and job placement)

- Youth diversion and reentry (life coaching, court/school-based restorative justice youth programming)
- Gender-based violence response (outreach and crisis response, emergency housing, bedside advocates, and wraparound supports for survivors)
- Community-led activities that promote healing
- Grassroots programs that supports innovate community-based violence reduction

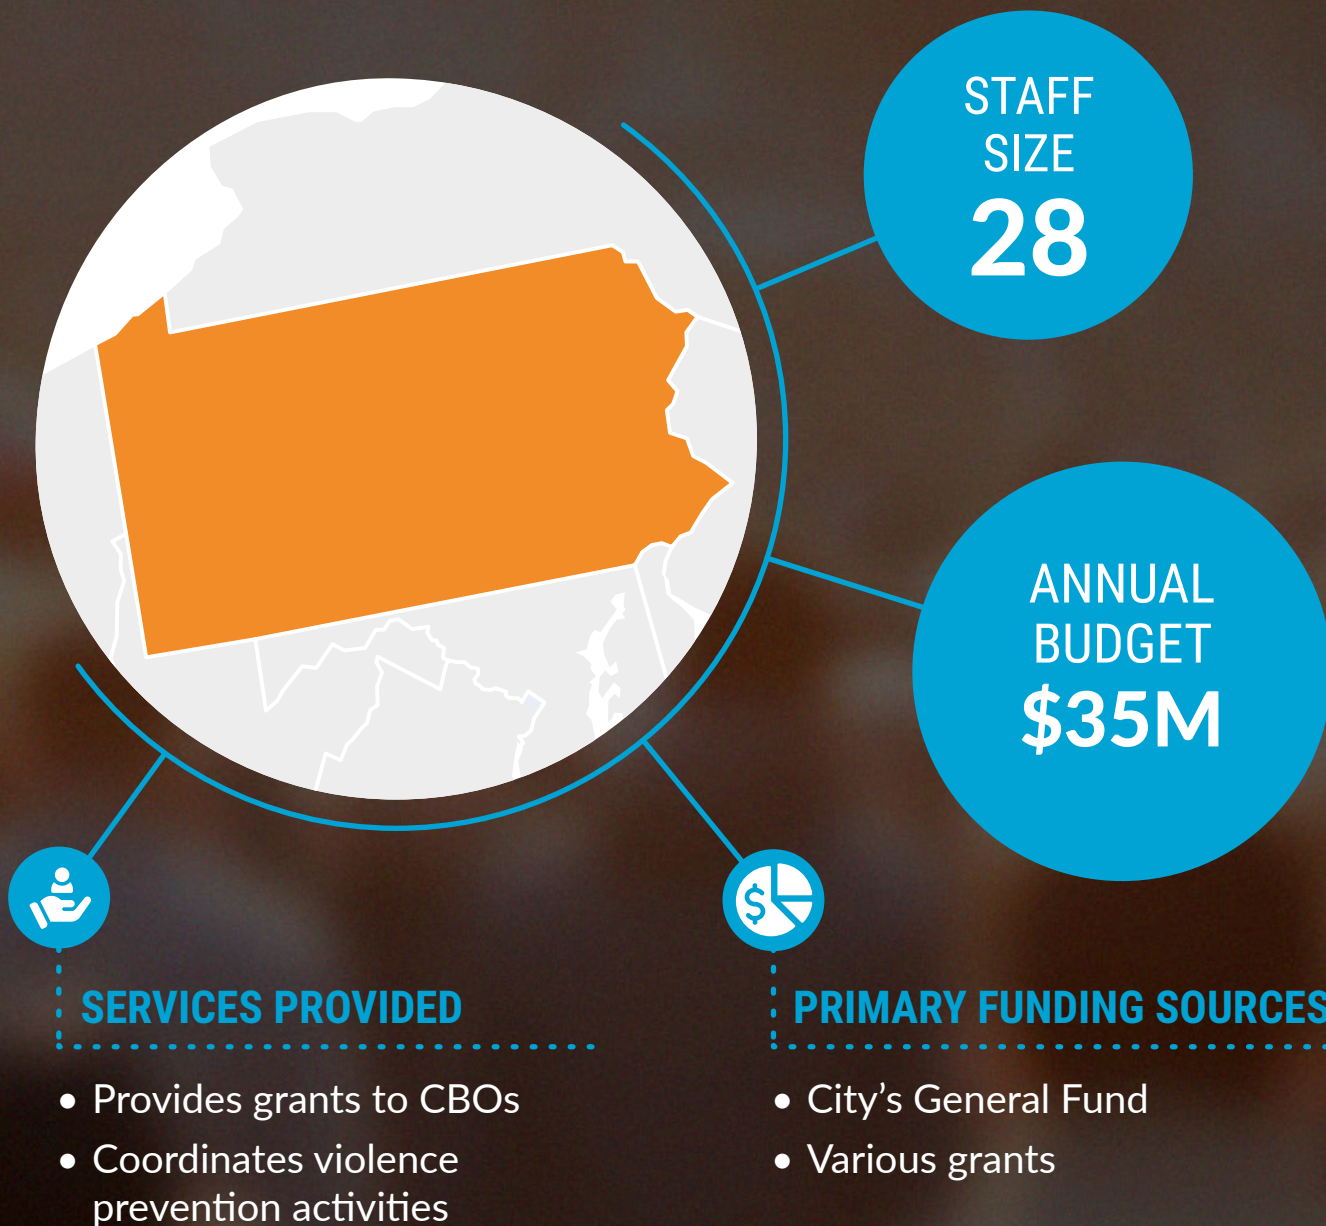

In addition, the DVP provides grants to CBOs, coordinates violence prevention activities, supports policy development, and conducts research.

In May of 2021, the Department submitted a strategic plan for 2022-2024 to the Public Safety and Services Violence Prevention Oversight Commission. The plan was informed by feedback from community members, volunteers, and organizations with an established history of violence prevention work in Oakland. Community engagement efforts included citywide town halls, focus groups and interviews with subject matter experts, DVP staff, and local partners.

Office of Violence Prevention

The Philadelphia Office of Violence Prevention was established in 2017 and has an annual budget of $35,000,000, with funding from the City's General Fund and various grants. Housed in the City Manager's Office, the Office of Violence Prevention has 28 FTEs. The mission of the Office of Violence Prevention is to implement strategies and initiatives to prevent, reduce, and end violence in Philadelphia.³⁸ The Philadelphia Office of Violence Prevention is particularly focused on addressing gun violence and creating safer communities by partnering with community organizations to implement the Philadelphia Roadmap to Safer Communities and providing community alternatives to violence.³⁹ The OVP also supports local efforts such as the Community Crisis Intervention Program, Violence Prevention Partnership, and Group Violence Intervention.⁴⁰ Equally important, the Office provides grants to CBOs and coordinates local violence prevention activities. Community engagement efforts have included a series of community listening tours to learn more about Philadelphia residents' attitudes toward neighborhood gun violence and the City's efforts to combat it.⁴¹

Strategies such as GVI/CeaseFire, Cure Violence, street outreach / violence interruption, and mentoring / case management, are all in use by the Office and/or the City. The City recently expanded the capacity of many anti-violence models through Targeted Community Investment Grants and Community Expansion Grants. Expanded strategies include the Philadelphia Crisis Line and Community Mobile Crisis Teams.⁴² The City is also set to launch the Rapid Employment and Development Initiative, based on a Chicago program that works to engage those at highest risk of violence through cognitive behavioral methods, access to paid work, and professional development support.⁴³

Office of Violence Prevention

The Portland Office of Violence Prevention was established in 2006 and has an annual budget of $2,100,000, with support from the City's General Fund and various grants. There are eight FTEs in the agency, one of which is vacant. The Office of Violence Prevention is housed within the City's Office of Management and Finance within the Community Safety Division. The Office views gun violence as a public health problem. Its approach to that problem is based on a shared understanding that violence is a virus that can be prevented and treated. As a result, the Office of Violence Prevention engages in three main lanes of work:

- The Primary Prevention Lane aims to prevent violence before it occurs, focusing on upstream efforts that address root causes that contribute to long-term gun violence reductions. It consists of efforts to promote healthy development in the general population.
- The Secondary Prevention Lane focuses on treating immediate injury and harm resulting from violent incidents. Early interventions or response to an immediate threat of violence/conflict (also called selective prevention) involve assistance for individuals who are at increased risk for violence. Mentoring programs and conflict-mediation assistance are examples of these services.
- The Tertiary Prevention Lane refers to a range of activities aimed at addressing the medium and long-term effects of violence and abuse, including therapy and other rehabilitation efforts. This lane consists of intensive services for individuals who have engaged in some degree of violent behavior, with the aim of preventing a recurrence or escalation of aggression.

The Office coordinates violence prevention activities, provides direct services, engages in policy development, and provides grants to CBOs. The OVP oversees Street Level Outreach Workers. Though afterschool programming, mentoring, and community recreation events in violence hotspots, these violence interrupters engage in relentless outreach with youth ages 8-18 who are risk of being involved in violence.⁴⁴ The OVP also employs a Community Engagement Specialist who acts as liaison between the OVP and the community and who works to strengthen relationships with community-based groups, residents, elected officials, and law enforcement. This position also collects and shares data regarding gun violence, organizes events for the community, and supports events hosted by partners or community members. The OVP's ongoing community engagement efforts include the Community Peace Collaborative, a monthly public forum that brings together a group of relevant stakeholders, community-based organizations, and community members to coordinate resources and hold space for community voices on important issues surrounding violence.⁴⁵ More broadly, strategies in use by the Office and/or the City include GVI/ CeaseFire, street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, youth diversion programming, restorative justice, reentry services, and hospital-based violence intervention.

The Healing Streets Project in Ramsey County was created in 2019 and has an annual budget of $2,500,000, with funding from the County's General Fund, various grants, and levy funds. Housed in the County Manager's Office, the Healing Streets Project has 13 FTEs, including eight filled positions and five vacant positions. The Project's mission is to reduce and put a stop to retaliatory and reciprocal gun violence. To this end, the Project provides direct services, coordinates local violence prevention activities, and engages in policy development and research. An evaluation of the Healing Streets Project is currently underway. More broadly, strategies such as street outreach / violence interruption, victim-centered services, mentoring / case management, and a hybrid of the Advance Peace model are all in use by the County.

Office of Neighborhood Safety

The Office of Neighborhood Safety (ONS) in the City of Richmond, CA was established in 2007. The Office has an annual budget of $4,000,000, with funding from the City's General Fund and a California Violence Intervention and Prevention grant. There are 18 FTEs in the agency. The Office of Neighborhood Safety is responsible for directing gun violence prevention and intervention initiatives that foster greater community well-being and public safety and achieving tangible reductions in firearm-related assaults and deaths.⁴⁶ The Office was developed through two years of robust community engagement. Strategies such as street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, and fellowship opportunities are all in use by the Office and/or the City.

The Richmond Office of Neighborhood Safety coordinates violence prevention activities and provides direct services, including through the Peacemaker Fellowship. This Fellowship interrupts gun violence by providing transformational opportunities to young men involved in lethal firearm offenses and placing them in a high-touch, personalized fellowship. By working with and supporting a targeted group of individuals at the core of gun hostilities, the Peacemaker Fellowship bridges the gap between anti-violence programming and a hard-to-reach population at the center of violence in urban areas, thus breaking the cycle of gun hostilities and altering the trajectory of these men's lives.⁴⁷ ONS also uses Neighborhood Change Agents who conduct daily sweeps of their communities to identify and intervene with those at highest risk for being involved in violence.⁴⁸ ONS's successful model resulted in a more than 70% reduction in homicides in the City and has been replicated in other cities through Advance Peace.⁴⁹ The efficacy of the Office's work is supported by numerous robust evaluations, including a Process Evaluation overseen by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency and an evaluation of Advance Peace's Peacemaker Fellowship.⁵⁰

The St. Louis Office of Violence Prevention was established in 2022 through a City Board Bill.⁵⁴ The Office has an annual budget of $2,613,267, with funding from the City's General Fund. The OVP has also received over $20,500,000 in American Rescue Plan Act funding, and $700,000 from the Municipalities Reimagining Community Safety Initiative. There are 18 FTEs in the agency, including nine filled positions and nine vacant positions. Housed in the City's Department of Public Safety, the Office of Violence Prevention coordinates public safety resources and community violence intervention programs to make St. Louis neighborhoods safer.⁵⁵ The Office also provides grants to CBOs and engages in policy development.

The Office of Violence Prevention's main initiatives include a Cure Violence program, a crisis response team that prioritizes non-law enforcement response, community violence intervention programming involving violence mediation and restorative justice in priority neighborhoods, reentry programs that offer case management and pretrial screenings,⁵⁶ and diversion programs for justice-involved youth. More broadly, strategies such as street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, employment assistance, fellowship opportunities, and hospital-based violence intervention are all in use by the Office and/or the City. In developing the OVP, the Mayor's Office conducted numerous Public Safety Town Halls to gauge public sentiment and obtain community input. Ongoing community outreach efforts for programming include community workshops with justice-impacted youth and families that directly inform juvenile justice reform policy.

The St. Paul Office of Neighborhood Safety (ONS) was established in 2021 and has an annual budget of $1,405,760, with funding from the City's General Fund, the American Rescue Plan Act, and various grants. There are four FTEs in the agency, including the Director, Manager of the Neighborhood Safety Community Council, Administrative Assistant, and a Management Assistant (vacant). Housed in the Mayor's Office and the City Attorney's Office, the ONS leads the advancement of the City's Community-First Public Safety framework through the coordination of Community-First investments, including gun, youth, and group violence prevention strategies as well as alternative response.⁵⁷ The Community-First Public Safety Framework involves:

- enhancing the capacity of public safety systems;
- improving community connectivity and support;
- leveraging research and data to inform policy and strategies;
- collaborating to create shared expectations, processes, and outcomes; and
- designing public spaces for safety.

The ONS provides grants to CBOs, coordinates local violence prevention activities, and engages in research. This work is informed by input from the Neighborhood Safety Community Council, which is overseen by the ONS and engages community residents, local stakeholders, and public safety representatives to assist in creating strategy and directing resources. One of the Office's main initiatives is Project PEACE, a methodical, individualized gun violence intervention that connects gun violence-involved individuals with evidence-based, community-led programming and wraparound supports. More broadly, strategies such as GVI/CeaseFire, street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, and employment assistance are all in use by the ONS and/or the City.

Office of Violence Prevention

The Stockton Office of Violence Prevention was established in 1999 and has an annual budget of $2,000,000. Funding sources for the Office are the City's General Fund, California Violence Intervention and Prevention Grant funding, and a special tax known as Measure A.⁵⁸ There are approximately 15 FTEs, including 14 full-time positions (3 vacancies) and two part-time positions (1 vacancy). Housed in the City Manager's Office, the OVP works to significantly reduce gang/group gun violence within the city of Stockton, using data-driven partnerships, programs, and strategies. Strategies such as GVI/ CeaseFire, street outreach / violence interruption, victim-centered services, mentoring / case management, employment assistance, and hospital-based violence intervention are all in use by the Office and/or the City.

The Office of Violence Prevention coordinates local violence prevention activities and provides grants to local CBOs. Two of the Office's main programs are Operation Ceasefire and Operation Peacekeeper. Based on Boston's revolutionary gun violence reduction strategy model, Stockton's Operation Ceasefire is a collaborative effort between government officials, community and faith-based organizations, and the Stockton Police Department to improve outcomes among those at the highest risk of being involved in violence.⁵⁹ Early in its implementation, this strategy reduced homicides in Stockton by 43%.⁶⁰ Operation Peacekeeper, established in 1998, utilizes outreach workers known as "peacekeepers" to engage with young people at the highest risk of being involved in gun violence.⁶¹ Peacekeepers collaborate with CBOs, faith-based organizations, and other partners to provide this population with resources including conflict resolution, mediation, mentoring, and intensive case management, with the goal of reducing gun violence in the city.⁶² The OVP's ongoing community engagement efforts include daily Peacekeeper operations, where staff canvass the city and liaison with high-risk individuals; Data Cafe events, which provide a public forum to present OVP program data and outcome statistics;⁶³ and community-wide food distribution events.

Office of Gun Violence Prevention

The Office of Gun Violence Prevention (OGVP) in Washington, DC, was established in 2022 and has an annual budget of $1,400,000, with funding from the District's General Fund. There are six filled FTEs in the OGVP. Housed in the Office of the City Administrator, the OGVP provides grants to CBOs, coordinates violence prevention activities, and engages in policy development and research. To ensure alignment with community needs and priorities, OGVP staff attend community meetings each week that are organized by local CBOs, government agencies, and residents. The Office is also currently developing formal channels for community input.

The main objectives of the OGVP are to coordinate the Building Blocks DC initiative and prevent gun violence through policy, accountability, community engagement, and data/research. Building Blocks DC is a District-wide approach to prevent and reduce gun violence in the 151 blocks that have the most gun violence.⁶⁴ This initiative involves reentry programming, youth services, behavioral health services, economic opportunities, an immediate shooting response, improvement of physical spaces, and community violence intervention.⁶⁵ More broadly, strategies such as street outreach / violence interruption, mentoring / case management, employment assistance, and hospital-based violence intervention are all in use by the Office and/or the District.

The Washington, DC Office of Neighborhood Safety and Engagement (ONSE) was established in 2017 through the Neighborhood Engagement Achieves Results Act.⁶⁶ ONSE has 105 FTEs and an annual budget of $36,500,000, with funding from the District's General Fund. Housed in the Office of the Deputy Mayor for Public Safety and Justice, ONSE awards grants to CBOs and provides direct services. The mission of ONSE is to foster community-based strategies to help prevent violence and increase public safety.⁶⁷ These strategies are rooted in a public health approach to violence prevention, recognizing that reducing crime is not accomplished through law enforcement alone.⁶⁸ Specific strategies include:⁶⁹

- Violence Intervention and Prevention Program: ONSE contracts with local CBOs and Violence Interrupters to help reduce violence by establishing a strong presence in communities with high levels of violence. This program partners with residents, government agencies, and CBOs to reduce violence by building relationships with individuals and families most at risk of being directly affected by gun violence.
- Pathways Program: This transitional employment program focuses annually on up to 50 individuals at the highest risk of being involved in violence, using a health-based approach to provide support in the areas of employment, education, mental health, conflict resolution, and housing stability. ONSE Caseworkers and Credible Messengers also provide long-term support to every Pathways Program participant.
- Family and Survivor Services: This program is utilized as the framework for the District's emergency critical response planning in reaction to all homicides and any shootings suspected of being gang/crew related. Through the facilitation of cross-agency critical response teams, ONSE immediately connects families to government programs and services such as support groups and workshops on stress management and self-care.⁷⁰

- Promotion of Economic Opportunity: The ONSE team connects residents with housing, entrepreneurial, and economic opportunities through job fairs, community outreach, violence interventions, and mobile resources. In partnership with the Department of Employment Services and the Department of Small and Local Business Development, ONSE ensures that those most overlooked have a fair shot at these economic opportunities.
- School-Based Initiative: The ONSE Leadership Academy is a school-based pilot initiative focusing on positive youth development in partnership with local schools. The Academy aims to promote school and community safety and alleviate barriers to success for the highest-risk students. The Academy team collaborates with school administrators, teachers, and professionals to conduct this critical work.⁷¹

ONSE also engages in ongoing community outreach through a specialized Community Outreach Team that organizes events in priority neighborhoods to build community, promote resources, and share helpful information to make communities safer.⁷² The Community Outreach Team encourage togetherness within neighborhoods, motivating them to be tight-knit communities and assisting them with activities such as safety walks and patrols.⁷³
